Keil-Line signal kits are easy to assemble, inexpensive and are prototypically correct. They consist of durable, fine white metal castings, brass masts, ladders and braces where necessary. They are easily assembled using CA(ACC) glue and/or soldering. Plastic true color, prototypical lens assemblies are included. These lens assemblies will accept T-1 size LED's or the incandescent bulbs included with the kit. All Keil-Line signal kits are available with or without bulbs or LED's.

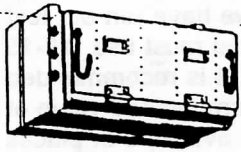

Keil-Line signal kits are furnished with a 12 volt "Grain-O-Rice" bulbs. We suggest that these bulbs be operated at a reduced voltage for a more prototypical appearance and much longer bulb life. About seven (7) volts works very well. Using this voltage, we have run our test signals twenty four hours a day for over a year without any bulb failure. If you must use 12-15 volt constant power such as the accessory terminals on your power supply, it is recommended that a resistor is used in series with the common leads of the bulbs. The recommended value of the resistor is 1/4 Watt, 100 Ohm. These are inexpensive and are regularly available at places such as "Radio Shack".

Keil-Line Products, at this time, does not furnish any type of signal operating or detection circuits. These are available from many model railroad electronics manufactureres, such as "Circuitron", "Dallee Electronics", etc.
